Missoula women fight MX Missile

Melinda Sinistro
Kaimin Contributing Reporter

The Missoula Women for Peace see themselves as an essential cog in what they call the "anti-nuclear force."

"We are a sisterhood of women all over the world for peace against nuclear weapons," said Alice Campbell, a member of MWP.

The group has worked with Montanans for Peace in El Salvador, the University of Montana Women's Center and the Women's International League of Peace in opposing nuclear power.

Montana Women for Peace holds bi-weekly Monday night meetings at which letters are written to representatives and activities are planned for fund-raising.

"We started with Vietnam," said Campbell, who has been with the group since it started more than ten years ago, "and we see similarities between El Salvador and Vietnam."

"Vietnam began when we sent our advisers there to settle disputes and our advisers are now in El Salvador," said Campbell.

"Since Reagan took office, our foreign policy is the worst it's ever been."

The group's main concern now is the MX missile controversy. "The MX is our biggest target right now," said Campbell. "Peace is our only chance for survival, and to obtain it we must simply stop this."

Habbe recommends Yee not be reappointed

Pam Newbern
Kaimin Reporter

University of Montana President Neil Bucklew said Friday that he had received a letter from Academic Vice President Donald Habbe recommending that Dean Yee of the School of Education not be reappointed after his contract runs out on June 30, 1982.

"I will discuss this with Dean Yee and I will act when I have reached a sound decision," Bucklew said. "Dean Yee will fulfill his duties this year. It has not been recommended that he not continue as dean this year."

Habbe said he had evaluated Yee's performance as dean of the education school and based his recommendation on this evaluation. He would not comment on why he had recommended that Yee not be reappointed.

Habbe said the process for a national search for a new dean would begin immediately after

Bookstore loses big money

Deb Thiele
Kaimin Reporter

Students are thieves — at least if you consider the shoplifting statistics from the Associated Students' Store.

More than $100,000 worth of merchandise disappeared from the shelves of the student-owned store last year and Bryan Thornton, store manager, attributes it to shoplifting.

Shoplifting, which cost students $81,407 in 1979-80, jumped 27 percent last year to $109,000, according to Thornton.

Thornton said the increase was caused partly by inflation and partly by more books being stolen. Book prices have gone up 12 to 13 percent each year, he said, but of the $109,000 worth of merchandise lost, $90,000 was textbooks.

"It's alarming," he said, "when you consider each of the 9,000 university students had over ten dollars stolen from them." He said students will have to pay for the shoplifting through price increases.

"In the past," Thornton said, "I was able to give the students a discount — 10 percent on new textbooks and supplies, and 15 percent on used textbooks. I try to hit a break-even point, but now I can't give a discount because of the (loss)."

According to Thornton, efforts are being made to reduce the amount of shoplifting by hiring two uniformed security officers during the first week in each quarter, and by rearranging the check-out stands.

In case that doesn't end the problem, Thornton said, the store's board of directors is considering investing in a security system.

One system they are considering is a PhotoScan Video System. It consists of two camera bubbles that project areas of the store on a television monitor. The system would enable store employees to monitor the store throughout the day.

But, according to Thornton, the initial cost of the system would be about $13,000 for installation. An additional $22,000 would be needed to employ two staff members to monitor it.

"If the security system were installed," Thornton said, "it would have to reduce shoplifting by over 25 percent in order to pay for itself."

This isn't likely because the majority of shoplifting occurs during the rush week, he said, adding that it is very difficult to spot a shoplifter among huge numbers of people, even with a monitor.

"The students, the faculty and the staff must all help if shoplifting is to be reduced," Thornton said.

Library fund could benefit all

Periodically scholarship funds are established to commemorate those who have made a significant contribution to a university's education system.

The funds are usually used to further information and education. Scholarships and visiting professor programs only logically bring a fresh viewpoint and new interpretations to a field that students have not yet heard.

The concept behind such funds is commendable and necessary at any institution of higher education. But it's about time that the concept spread to another area here at UM that is in critical need of new information — namely in the form of hardbound books.

Why not set up, for the Mansfield Library, a sizable fund of contributions from sympathetic students and alumni from which the interest could be used to fund acquisitions?

The library is critically short of books. According to guidelines drawn by the American Council of Libraries, UM is at least 100,000 books short of the number recommended for an institution this size. New book purchases have been curtailed for several years now, and periodical subscriptions have had to be cancelled to pay utility bills instead.

Students and faculty alike criticize the library. Book reserves are low and often incomplete. The supply of current periodicals is embarrassingly insufficient for faculty members and students working on research projects.

Administrators are also aware of the grave problems at the library, especially since a bill introduced at the Legislature last session to appropriate $1.4 million to the university system for book purchases was killed. However, when it comes to paying the bills — an obligation — or buying new books — seemingly a luxury — the bills will be paid first.

Several well-intended attempts have been made to raise money for the library. The Friends of the Library have worked hard to donate about $4,000 a year consistently to the library. Private contributions from individuals and businesses net sporadic donations of anywhere from $5 to $500. The library has also received about $2,500 from the Excellence Fund this year.

However, while these and other donations are helpful and appreciated, they are not always consistent, nor are they big enough to make a real dent in what the library needs to purchase.

And it needs plenty — about $2.2 million to bring it up to the ACL's guidelines.

While a student excellence fund could by no means raise that kind of money, it could help.

Such a fund would be by and for students seeking to improve their own lot and the university as an institution. If the fund was large enough — $25,000 to $50,000 — the interest from the principal could be used, thus ensuring perpetual contributions.

Student involvement in a library fund would not only be an investment in a valuable resource — books — but also in the educational opportunities of future students at UM. It's possible to leave the place in better shape than we found it.

Hollywood gossip

Editor: Judging from the quality of the questions asked in your interview with U of M President Bucklew, one would believe you spent your summer reporting for some Hollywood gossip magazine. Your questions were in poor taste and hardly relevant. Specifically, questions such as what type of alcohol you drink and whom you voted for in the last election do not belong in an interview intended for university distribution. Instead of asking silly questions, you should have asked questions that would shed some light on Bucklew's proposed direction for the university. Examples: What goals has he set?

What new ideas might he have? What weaknesses does the university have? What will the university do if enrollment drops due to reduction in financial aid, etc.?

It doesn't take any mastermind to dream up relevant and important questions worthy of an interview with the "Freshman President." But you demonstrated mental-midget thinking in your tasteless interview. In the future, either conduct a proper interview or sell the space for advertising. Don't waste paper, time, and money on trash questions.

About the Kaimin

The Montana Kaimin, a student-run newspaper, derives its name from the Kootenai-Salish word for "written message." Published four times a week, the Kaimin attempts to bring students, faculty and staff of the University of Montana important campus news and events.

Our editorial page is open to everyone, and we welcome all questions, complaints and suggestions. If you feel like bitching or want to plug your favorite cause, write us a letter and drop it off in the office. Letters should be signed, preferably typed double-spaced and under 200 words.

Montanan coasts through gas crunch

GREAT FALLS (AP)—Roland Wench has to do a lot of coasting and some explaining, but he figures his electric car has cost him only 2.1 cents per mile for the past five years.

Wench, an electrician, bought the car from the Electric Fuel Propulsion Co., which built it on a Chevelle body as a prototype to see how long its batteries would last. When the batteries burned out, he says, he bought it for $6,000 and got its $38,000 worth of electrical components free.

Those components, says Wench, are the heart of the operation. They alternately switch the electric motor to a generator each one-thousandth of a second. The motor doesn't generate as much electricity as it consumes, but the alternation greatly extends the car's range.

Wench says the range is 150 miles, but that his longest trip has been 87 miles, halfway to Helena and back. He takes advantage of Montana's hilly terrain to conserve electricity by coasting as much as possible. And he avoids the brake when he can.

He says he can coast from Gore Hill, on the south edge of Great Falls, almost to his home if he hits the traffic lights right, but that at the bottom of Gore Hill he's coasting at 90 miles per hour. That's where the explaining comes in.

A highway patrolman stopped him once for speeding. Wench explained that the 55 m.p.m. speed limit was designed to conserve energy and that if he used his brake he would be wasting electricity.

The officer's response was, "What?"

Wench says he then got out to show the patrolman that the car was electric, but the officer froze, so Wench got back in the car and drove away.

Wench replaced the original batteries for $9,000, but says the control system and motor have needed little or no repair or maintenance.

He's now overhauling the control system and replacing the batteries, but says the new ones are only half as large as the originals—and cost only $2,000.

Local pharmacists plead innocent to drug charges

The owners of two Missoula drug stores pleaded innocent yesterday in U.S. District Court here to charges of illegally dispensing drugs.

A grand jury in Billings indicted Robert and Bradley Stoick last month.

Robert Stoick, 56, was indicted on five counts of illegally dispensing drugs and one of failure to keep accurate records, as required by federal regulations. Bradley Stoick, 31, was indicted on four counts of illegally dispensing drugs and one of failure to keep accurate records.

Bradley is president of Stoick

Drug Inc. and Robert is secretary-treasurer of the firm.

Both Stoicks are graduates of the University of Montana School of Pharmacy.

Judge Russell Smith set a trial date of Nov. 30.

The defendants' attorney, H. L. McChesney, entered several motions at the court hearing.

McChesney asked Smith to impose a "gag" order so that all statements made to the media by the prosecution first must be approved by the U.S. Attorney's office, and that all statements made to the media by the defendants first must be approved by their attorneys.

He also asked that the prosecution be forced to provide the defense with a bill of particulars. That document would include the times and places where the alleged crimes occurred, the names and addresses of all witnesses, all persons who had materials seized and all informants used by the prosecution.

McChesney claimed he does not have sufficient knowledge of the alleged crimes to prepare a defense.

At the time the indictments were handed up, John Russell of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration said the charges against the Stoicks basically mean that doctors' prescriptions could not be found to account for the sale of certain drugs.

Harvesters scramble for magic mushrooms

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP)—The fields are alive with the psounds of psilliness.

It's magic mushroom time again in British Columbia, and hundreds of harvesters are at work picking psilocybin mushrooms for the sake of their natural and legal "high".

"It's just something to do, you know," one young woman said in nearby Richmond on Sunday. "Like in the winter there's skiing and in the fall there's mushroom picking."

Which explains why she was in a group of about 25, crawling around on her hands and knees in a dirty, wet field near Vancouver International Airport.

"Like, it's an OK way to spend a Sunday afternoon, you know?" she added.

Others were at work in various favored spots through the Lower Mainland, Vancouver Island and in that mystically popular spot for B.C. mushroom fans, the Queen Charlotte Islands.

Is the labor expended worth the mild high produced by the chemicals in the tiny mushrooms?

"Sure it's worth it," said a grinning youth picking near the woman in Richmond. "It's kinda natural, you know?"

The Richmond pickers compared the effects of the mushrooms with mild LSD, marijuana and "a couple beers."

Dance company to perform

The Margaret Jenkins Dance Company, one of San Francisco's leading dance companies, will perform three dances tonight in the University Theater at 8 p.m.

Tickets are $4 for students and senior citizens and $5 for general public and are available at the box office in the University Center and at the door.

Jenkins, who is conducting a five-day workshop and teaching a techniques class through the dance division of the School of Fine Arts, choreographed all three dances. Two of the dances were done in collaboration with poet Michael Palmer.

HUMPHREY BOGART • LAUREN BACALL

IN HOWARD HAWKS'

TO HAVE AND HAVE NOT

Bacall and Bogart, in love off and on the set, give performances that crackle with innuendo and sexual electricity in this adventure classic by Howard Hawks! Based nominally on a story by Hemingway, this is our favorite of the Bogart pictures and one of its director's very best. Bogart plays the American expatriate owner of a fishing boat plying out of Martinique who consistently declines to join the Free French—until his sense of self is directly threatened. Lauren Bacall, a pretty pickpocket stranded in Martinique and in need of a match, helps him change his mind in her sizzling, unforgettable debut performance. With Walter Brennan as Eddie, Bogie's rummy buddy; Marcel Dalio as Frenchy; Dan Seymour as the oily Capt. Renard; and Hoagy Carmichael at the piano. (But, do you know who dubbed Bacall's singing voice?) 35mm revival print! Plus, RONALD REAGAN COMEDY CLIPS: the moral majority may gasp to hear Ronnie profane The Lord's name nineteen times but should be reassured to learn of his inability to remove a lady's dress properly in this compilation of outtakes, accidental outrages and minor stupidities rescued from the Warner Bros. cutting room floor in the '30s and '40s! 1944.

Deadline nears for applications

Applications from University of Montana students will be accepted until Oct. 16 for Fulbright Scholarships for 1982-83. The scholarships are available for study or research abroad in academic fields and for professional training in the creative arts.

Interested UM students should contact Robert Acker, campus Fulbright adviser, Social Sciences 207, 243-4538.

Individuals not enrolled at UM should contact the Institute of International Education at 809 United Nations Plaza, New York, NY 10017.

Acker said it is expected that 516 awards to 50 countries will be available.

Applicants must be U.S. citizens at the time of application and should hold a bachelor's degree or equivalent before the beginning date of the grant, September 1982. They should be proficient in the language of the host country and be in good health.

Creative and performing artists are not required to have a bachelor's degree but must have four years of professional study or equivalent experience.

Social work applicants must have at least two years of professional experience after the master of social work degree.

Law allows landlords access

Editor's note: This is the fifth of a six-part series dealing with the problems of renting in Missoula. The series is written by ASUM Legal Services Manager Bruce Barrett.

Many tenants have problems with landlords who continually enter the rented unit. Although most people would think that once a place is rented the landlord may not enter, this is not the case under Montana law. Tenants should understand that the law is fairly liberal in allowing landlords to enter a rented apartment or house.

Generally, a landlord is required to give a tenant 24 hours advance notice before entering the premises and to enter at reasonable times. However, this 24 hour notice is not required if it would be "impracticable" to give. This, combined with an emergency right to enter, gives the tenant little protection from continued entries by the landlord. Common sense would dictate that students who are tenants should keep the possible presence of the landlord in mind as they plan their various decorations, displays and activities.

In spite of its many weaknesses, the law does state that a landlord may not abuse his right of access or use it to harass the tenant. If the landlord does abuse his right of access by exercising it unreasonably or for the purpose of continually harassing the tenant, the tenant should seek legal help. The law states that the tenant may seek a court injunction to stop the conduct of the landlord, and in some cases the tenant will be allowed to terminate his rental agreement with the landlord even if it's a long-term lease.

If the tenant is damaged by the landlord's conduct, he may sue for damages. In such a suit, the tenant could try to show that the value of the rented place was diminished by the conduct of the landlord and sue for that amount at least.

WANTED: TUTORS

Applications are now being taken in the Center for Student Development for the CSD-ASUM Tutoring Program. In this jointly sponsored program, the cost to students of tutoring is partially defrayed by funds provided by ASUM.

We are seeking tutors with the following qualifications:

- Sophomore status or above.
- Overall G.P.A. of 2.5.
- 3.0 average in course(s) you would like to tutor.
- Ability to obtain departmental approval as a tutor in the course(s) to be tutored.
- Attendance at an evening tutor training session on Oct. 7.

Rates will be $3.75 per hour for tutors who are sophomores and juniors, $4.05 for tutors who are seniors and graduate students. Interested students should pick up tutor applications in the Center for Student Development and return by Tuesday, Oct. 6. Prospective tutors may address questions concerning the program to Susie Bouton, Tutor Coordinator, in the CSD (243-4711) between 1:30 and 3:00 daily.

Aviation students may replace striking aircraft controllers

College Press Service

In what could be a move to fill the gap left by 12,000 striking air traffic controllers, the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) has been negotiating with Florida's Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University to allow juniors and seniors to work toward becoming air traffic controllers while continuing their work toward a university degree.

The FAA would pay qualified students $12,000 a year. On-the-job training would count as academic credit for graduation from Embry-Riddle. The training program would probably last at least two years.

Asked if the program was part of an effort to replace the 12,000 controllers on strike since August, a tight-lipped FAA spokesman said "I would assume that's true."

"The initiative came from both sides," says a considerably more loquacious Dr. Bill Motzell, special programs director at Embry-Riddle and chief university coordinator of the proposed FAA project. "We've always maintained close contacts with the FAA," he explains. "It just came up in conversation between us."

The main goals of MWP, which now has 50 members, are to "educate the public through films, public forums, and radio as to the dangers of nuclear power" and to "keep tabs on the state's congressional delegation while updating them on our issues."

Connie Skrisen, another MWP member who recently toured Europe, said the fear of nuclear war is widespread. "People over there definitely don't want another war, especially the college students," she said.

Skrisen and Campbell believe that no one really wants a nuclear war, but that not all nuclear opponents speak out.

Skrisen was in San Francisco last week during an anti-nuclear demonstration at which 4,000 people marched. "I call that support," she said.

Missoulian editor Sam Reynolds "referred to us as a 'wretched little group' in a recent editorial," said Skrisen, "but we are the ripple that causes the wave that changes opinions — it's the only way."

In his Missoulian editorial last week, Reynolds commented on the fact that most people don't like being approached by members of political groups who might circulate petitions or pamphlets, such as the ones currently being issued against the MX missile.

"It's true that people are reluctant to talk to us," said Skrisen. "To talk is to admit responsibility, and people don't want to take that burden on themselves," she said.

Skrisen said the idea of fighting for peace is almost taboo in some social circles. "In some church groups, for example, you might as well be talking about fornication," she said.

But MWP has found that many churches are becoming more vocal on the issue of nuclear power and are rising in opposition to it.

For example, MWP was recently asked to participate in a program scheduled for mid-October dealing with attaining world peace and sponsored by the United Church of Christ.

The group has tentatively planned a wine-tasting party in October and is planning a food sale Oct. 14 on the corner of University and Arthur. WILP, Women's International League of Peace, with which MWP will soon be affiliated, will also sponsor speaker Kay Kamp, its former chairwoman, Oct. 27-29 in the University Center.

acceptance of his recommendation by Bucklew.

Bucklew said that Habbe had discussed Yee's performance with him last spring. Habbe also explained to Yee his dissatisfaction with Yee's performance as dean.

Bucklew said Yee did not agree with Habbe's judgment about his performance.

Yee was unavailable for comment yesterday.

Lee Vonkuster, professor in the School of Education, said that Yee was "not very fair in his approach to human relationships. He didn't know how to work with people. He was very cold and impersonal in his relationships with the staff."

But Sara Steensland, chairwoman of the Department of Home Economics, was supportive of Yee.

"I'd like to see him succeed," Steensland said. "I've enjoyed working with Dean Yee and I have supported him. I'm just sorry to see it happen. I think it will be crippling to the School of Education during this year to have a lame duck dean."
